The Action Strategy for the further development of the Republic of Uzbekistan identifies areas such as "physically healthy, mentally and intellectually developed, independent-minded, strong-minded, loyal to the Fatherland, deepening democratic reforms and increasing their social activity in the development of civil society." It is important to develop a sense of patriotism of future lawyers in their institutions.

Consistent and effective implementation of the state youth policy, full support, protection of their rights and legitimate interests, education of enterprising, courageous young people capable of taking responsibility for the future of our country and full support of the Youth Union of Uzbekistan On July 18, 2017, the Resolution of the President of the Republic of Uzbekistan No. PP-3138 "On comprehensive measures to improve the activities of the Youth Union of Uzbekistan" was adopted.

The changes taking place in our country put on the agenda the training of physically healthy, morally pure, spiritually mature professionals with intellectual potential that will serve the development of society. The most important thing in our country is to train people who are morally pure, loyal to their profession, highly skilled and intellectually capable, who can sacrifice their lives for the Motherland and its people, who are not afraid of difficulties, who can withstand all the difficulties in serving the Motherland. issues.

The development of a sense of patriotism of future lawyers in the solution of this pressing problem, the education of social activism in them today, along with professional skills, also includes intellectual potential.

Ways of educating young people in knowledge and skills, courage of national heroes, unique scientific heritage of Tomaris, Shirak, Spitamen, Amir Temur, Sheikh Najmiddin Kubro, Jaloliddin Manguberdi, Pahlavon Mahmud, Zahiriddin Muhammad Babur, examples of patriotism. .

From the earliest times in the development of society, serious attention has been paid to the physical training of the younger generation. In the time of primitive society, people raised children in the process of labor activity. In the process, children learn to live and work by engaging directly in activities they can handle. They worked with men in difficult conditions, such as hunting and making weapons.

According to existing customs and traditions, young children have life experience in the presence of the elderly. Children began to participate in practical activities after passing certain tests in the team, nurse, or coaches. This tradition, that is, the transfer of children to nurses and coaches until a certain age, continues until recently, even today.

At the stage of the seed team, child labor and activity expand. Gradually, the primary forms of education began to enter.

The book "History" by the Greek historian Herodotus, who lived about 484-431 / 425 BC, also contains information about the educational activities of the ancient Persians, Saks, Massagets. The most honorable thing the Persians did was to be brave and proud of their sons. The king sent gifts to anyone who had a son.

From the age of five, children are taught to ride a horse, to shoot a bow, to speak neatly and correctly. The conditions themselves taught the children to ride horses, to shoot arrows, to cultivate in them the qualities of courage, integrity, bravery, as defenders of their people.

The heroic epics that have come down to us express the feelings of striving for the homeland and freedom, sacrificing one's life for one's country and tribe, fighting for glory and honor. Brave patriots like Tomaris, Shirak, great heroes love the homeland of heroes depicted in epic works about Rustam, Siyavush, Alpomish. A sense of great duty, sacrificing their lives for the homeland and the people, enduring any hardships are their main qualities. The main qualities of the national heroes were courage and bravery.

One of our ancient values, patriotism, courage and bravery of the people's wrestlers were brought up in wrestling. After all, wrestlers have always fought for the honor, beauty and dignity of their people.

In conclusion, the roots of our values of educating young people in the spirit of patriotism go back to ancient times. From time immemorial, our people have considered it their duty to educate young people to the highest standards of patriotism, courage, bravery, social activism.
