

GLOBALIZATION PROCESSES AND EDUCATION-UPBRINGING

Abbosova Shokhida Turdaliyevna

A teacher of Fergana State University, Fergana, Uzbekistan.

Annotation:

This article examines the progress of globalization processes in all countries and some of its consequences. In particular, some problems of its aspects related to education and upbringing are raised.

Key words:

Globalization, education, upbringing, progress of processes, development, information technologies, transplantation, xenotranslation, human genome, artificially strengthening, harmonization.

Currently, the processes of globalization, which are increasingly causing alarm among the general public, are in fact related to the fact that they did not appear today or yesterday. In fact, their roots go back a long way. After all, the first geographical discoveries, the expansion of trade routes, the development of science, the rapid development of industries at the world level laid the foundation for the further development of international relations in the world. Global processes are not limited to common human problems, it is not even a denial of reality. This is one aspect of this issue. Because the strengthening of integration and cooperation between states and peoples, an increase in the inflow of investments, the creation of favorable conditions for the free movement of capital and goods, labor, the creation of new jobs, the development of modern communications and information technologies, science, are the results of a sharp increase in events in its social - economic life, and its values acquire universal human significance and are harmonized in it, and the fact that the property of civilizations acquires new features occurs naturally due to globalization.

There is also a second aspect of the question: peoples who have got rid of the old thought forms and chains, in some cases, remain surrounded by influences that distract from the right path, and the flow of incomprehensible information does something to every free person. In our opinion, there is not a single industry or sphere where the processes of globalization have not penetrated. Today, it is no secret that globalization, which was initially joyfully welcomed, instead of solving problems, has aggravated and complicated them. In our days, the phenomena of globalization in the sense of "The more you know, the more you can", "In this world, everything is allowed to man" have spread so much that the question arises: Does the human Mind become his death?

Science is the highest fruit of human thought. But uncontrolled thinking, especially in the field of nanotechnology, intelligence machines, robots, genetic engineering, cloning, transplantation, xenotranslation, changing the human genome, artificially strengthening the human mind and body, the growing interest in creating nuclear, chemical, bacteriological weapons, and the use of all of the above seriously concerned the world community. In addition, a person who does not know the essence of political upheavals, demographic explosions, socio-economic crises, remains helpless before the processes that were once recognized as progressive.

The greatest influence of globalization processes is felt in the Outlook, consciousness and thinking of young people. Today, it is very difficult to say with confidence that these processes will not threaten our national values. This can be explained in the example of many emotional crises that occur in the following years.

The negative consequences of globalization processes are an unhealthy mood that affects the upbringing of the younger generation and causes anxiety for many, as it creates serious moral and moral problems. Whatever event happens in one or another corner of the world, the world community immediately receives news about it. After all, the reason why the processes of globalization are increasingly penetrating into all spheres of society is simple: "today, the development and prosperity of any state is so closely linked not only with its close and distant neighbors, but also with other regions and territories on a global scale that it is not difficult to understand and realize that excluding any country from this process does not lead to positive results" [2; 111].

Today, all the movements in the modern information space are so rapid that you can't look at them casually, as before, thinking "this event happened very far away from us, it has nothing to do with us. Another feature of the process of globalization is that any person who thinks sensibly will certainly observe that in modern conditions it becomes an extremely sharp tool of ideological influence that serves the interests of various political forces and centers" [2; 113].

Today, no one can guarantee that young people will keep up with the media at a time when the global information space is expanding. After all, even a small message directed against human spirituality, which, at first glance, seems insignificant, can cause huge, irreplaceable damage. With the inviolable preservation of the borders of any state, military power and armed forces are necessary like air and water. But we all have a serious responsibility, first of all, for the fact that a citizen should rely on preserving the inviolability of the spiritual world of the younger generation.

We all know that morality is a reflection of the life of society. If a person lived alone, he would have absolutely no need for morality. Obviously, an immoral society is in decline. Moral revolution at the highest level brings a person to the goal-position. The attainment of moral perfection is in the hands of man. When a person dominates his behavior, his emotions, educates the spirit, strives to master high moral qualities, a person receives the honorary title "Man".

In my opinion, there are ways to eliminate the negative impact of globalization on human moral perfection. To do this, it is necessary to widely promote the values that have been imbibed in the minds of people for centuries, among society, especially young people, take measures to overcome harmful illusions that threaten their perception of the world, abandon the lack of faith in society, and lay the foundations of modern principles for the development of our people. In my opinion, it is necessary to increase attention to eliminating the negative impact of globalization processes on all types and links of the education system, in particular, to review the training programs and study the increasingly declining philosophical knowledge, and to increase attention to the promotion of social and humanitarian Sciences.

In fact, globalization primarily means an extraordinary acceleration of the pace of life. Indeed, the impact of global changes taking place around the world today is reflected in both education and upbringing. This, on the one hand, implies an objective study of the impact of global changes on the spheres of human life as an objective process, and on the other-shows the practical significance of achieving and timely elimination of problems related to education. Therefore, it is unfair to evaluate the processes of globalization only as a negative value. Because the positive aspects of these processes are also not uncommon. Speaking about its positive aspects, we are talking about the strengthening of integration and partnership relations between States and peoples under the influence of direct globalization, the emergence of favorable conditions for the free movement of foreign investment, capital and goods, labor, the rapid spread of modern communication and information technologies, scientific achievements, the harmonization of various values on a universal basis, the acquisition of new qualities of intercultural dialogue., that increased opportunities for mutual assistance during environmental disasters are achieved through the globalization of tribes.

In fact, globalization primarily means an extraordinary acceleration of the pace of life. Indeed, the impact of global changes taking place around the world today is reflected in both education and upbringing. This, on the one hand, implies an objective study of the impact of global changes on the spheres of human life as an objective process, and on the other-shows the practical significance of achieving and timely elimination of problems related to education. Therefore, it is unfair to evaluate the processes of globalization only as a negative value. Because the positive aspects of these processes are also not uncommon. Speaking about its positive aspects, it is worth noting the strengthening of integration and partnership relations between States and peoples under the influence of direct globalization, the emergence of favorable conditions for the free movement of foreign investment, capital and goods, labor, the rapid spread of modern communication and information technologies, the achievement of science, the harmonization of various values on a universal basis, the acquisition of new qualities of intercultural dialogue, as well as the increase in opportunities for mutual assistance during environmental disasters.

References

1. Mirziyoyev Sh. The people with a great intention will have a great job, a bright life and a prosperous future– T.: "Uzbekistan", 2020.
2. Karimov I. High spirituality-an invincible force. - T.: "Spirituality", 2008.