Introduction

The sphere in which it is necessary to further develop and improve the social protection of young people is labor legislation. The Labor Code of the Republic of Uzbekistan and its legal systems provide for many privileges and privileges for young people. However, young people, especially those who have not reached the age of 18, minors, are tormented for a while in finding a job, because the lack of the necessary qualification-profession in them, insufficient life experience will cause them a difficult situation in the conditions of market relations, and this situation is natural. Despite our consistent work in the field of employment, it is noteworthy that today the number of temporarily unemployed people is negligible 300 thousand people, 560 thousand people or 5 percent of the aging active population of the labor-intensive population is in need of employment, and among unemployed people, adolescents under the age of exactly 18 years is significant.

The promotion of 5 important initiatives on March 19, 2019 on the systematic implementation of efforts by the president of our country Shavkat Mirziyoyev in the social, spiritual and educational spheres initiated another new stage in the history of Uzbekistan on the education of young people. [1].

The development of organizational and material contexts of the separation of talents among schoolchildren, young students and students studying in higher and secondary vocational colleges, the determination of the necessary criteria and on this basis the Bank of information on the Republican scale of talented youth is established, they stand in the special account of the state and society, the state and society, it is without doubt that the doubts about the fertile use of this unique divine blessing in the prosperity of the state and society are considered to be actual tasks.

One of the ways to accomplish this task is precisely these five initiatives, which will be widely introduced into Real life in the future, and the material and technical base and use of the cultural centers, music and art schools in the regions will be dramatically improved, and an additional 1.5 thousand circles will be formed due to the interest of young people. Even in the most remote rural cultural centers there are artistic and amateur teams, youth theater-studios and youth clubs.

Materials And Methods

In our complex and anti-dependent age, young people are given high demands for them in their life goals and socially acceptable choices. The social changes that are taking place have changed the appearance of man himself and society and Social Psychology. Within the framework of the existence of life, man expressed his throne in society. In human life, life strategy is among the most complex and significant events, because it reflects the integrity of the individual's vital World, his aspiration for the future and his ability to change his life for himself.

The way of life of an individual is such that the person chooses for himself a possible life strategy in it. Having understood his personal qualities and abilities, a person should be able to control the appropriate position in the social system to those people who have demonstrated the ability (talent) to strive for more by the future life situation, variants and society to benefit the existing social system.

A significant amount of qualitative changes in the conditions of Social Development, which sociology is understood as a process, have a positive feature. It is taken into account that the most important condition for social development is the personal capacity of members of society who are able to manifest a particular community and carry out its transformation. [2].

Social development can not only have institutional, organizational, etc., but also have a personal dimension. Personal size refers to the origin of the social character of a person in the norm of time. He or she will determine the quantitative and qualitative changes in the capacity of an individual in certain stages of society and competitive evolution of capacity of social groups and members of society.

Society is a supporter of supporting the potential of the individual. He not only ensures the revival of his people, the conditions in which he lives, but also integrates people and "absorbs" certain specific features in the spiritual structures of man as evidence. In it, a person acquires features that are characteristic of social importance (dignity, norms, knowledge, qualifications, types of behavior) and actively adapts to the social environment. And they are the offspring for his armful life activity in a competitive society.

Society for itself is the cultivation of people, which is necessary for the normal placement of the system of society and for its development.

It provides people with harmonized properties that are uniquely adapted to them. It requires social cultural signs and samples (language, Information, World pace, tradition, types of behavior, etc.) that are processed and checked by it. He needs such a level of social coordination of members of society that allows him to self-develop at the level of Group, institution, organizational and educational, valuable structures. It remains to be noted that the complexity and dynamism of society is manifested in the nokeracy and impossibility of achieving the highest peak of social coordination.

Sosiologist R.G.Minzaripov noted that the process of socializing a young specialist's personality in the conditions of the exchange of the social environment of classical universities is reflected in cooperative activities within the framework of social processes of cooperation, that is, in the process of training and training specialists in the future. [3].

Personal capacity building and social development are interrelated. After all, at a certain stage, the object processes develop more advanced than individual changes. But some cases of sub-processes in the process of socialization are relatively dynamic in those cases where the flexibility of each individual is enhanced. This can lead to the appearance of a new quality in the embodiment of other specific personality aspects of the individual potential of society. In this case, the sub-processes become the first-level factor of society change and adaptation to new competitive conditions, when they are surpassed by objective processes. If we consider socialization – as a process, then we can distinguish three components in it.

A. Meaningful. "The content of the socialization process".

B. Dynamic. "Dynamics and stability of the social process".

S. The Institute. "Social institutions that carry out this process in society". All of these are involved in the implementation of the socialization process and form the potential of its social competitiveness. Today, social studies of young people are important, they allow us to get information about how young people are ensuring their personal development. In the same way, first, as in the conditions of social development, social norms are exchanged "taking into account Young and personal psychological characteristics, the ethos of personality traits are renewed, new conditions and norms of socialization are developed."

Secondly, how the socialization of young people is carried out;

Third, what is its result;

Courtesy-the interaction of teacher and student interaction within the institutional and extracurricular framework;

* Competitive-in the process of mastering different types of anti-cost prints and norms;

* Adaptation – acceptance by the individual in the example of cultural norms, norms and activities exchanged in the environment;

* The socialization of modern youth and the process of social integration can not be carried out under normal conditions, the deepening of their socio-economic inequality;

• The main crises of social institutions – Family, School, Army, higher educational institution and labor collective;

The development of the role of media in the modern society;

One of the founders of the theory of social order on the problem of social competition is T.Parsons offered his rasional side-by-side. He introduced the concept of societal society into special social communication. In the context of this term, the normative system of culture is understood, which ensures that a scientist has a certain value and Norm from birth. He also calls culture "a system of tokens for ensuring social interaction." The values and social norms of society are governed by the activities of its members, thereby ensuring the opportunities for a collaborative social life.

Conclusion

In conclusion, it is based on the fact that in all spheres of human life the phenomenon of competition has entered, from the day of the birth of a person, he is obliged to compete with himself and others like him. Competition for many in a developed society begins almost from childhood. The processes of competition among young people are manifested, especially between the level of the individual: to look forward, to manifest oneself from the good side, to be financially significant, to be encouraged, to be recognized by the public. Groupoo and generation raqobato are also competing. A completely different situation arises for young people of small towns, settlements and villages. Assessing and predicting the possibility of optimizing the competitive situation in the society requires the analysis and determination of holistic regressions in existing social institutions. From this point of view, the first president of our country I. The opinion of Karimov that "our children must be stronger, more educated, wiser and, of course, happier than we are," is of particular importance for the upbringing of the growing younger generation as mature, spiritually and competently in every possible way.

It should be taken into account that in the Bunda young people not only fulfill their role in the object of social innovation, but also perform only the role of active suicides. Otherwise, society is doomed to self-destruction. In other words, the conditions for the preservation of the Society of Uzbekistan and its prospects are the activities and status of young people both now and in the near future. What values do today's young people accept and deny, how they associate themselves with the wealth of "ancestors" – this is one of the important problems in the socialization of modern youth. Bunda serves as a competitor of competitive value systems in the social environment. The clash of values in the social order as an ethos of the interaction of individuals or individuals with values in society occurs.
